FOR STUDYING THE BIBLE

STUDY METHODS

There are numerous different ways to study the Bible.

- T.A.R.G.E.T. Method (Time, Ask, Read, Gather, Engage, Thank) - This method is available on our Resources Page.
- S.O.A.P Method (Scripture, Observation, Application, Prayer)

STUDY BIBLES

Study Bibles include extra commentary and information for almost every verse. This gives you a great understanding of the original meaning, context, and application. Just search...

- LIFE Application Study Bible (NIV or NLT)
- ESV Study Bible (comes with online access)

COMMENTARIES

Commentaries are books written based on the different books of the Bible. They are like a Study Bible on steroids. They are very in depth on each verse.

- Whole Set Commentaries (include most or all books of the Bible)
 - New American Commentary
 - Word Biblical Commentary
- Individual Commentaries (single books written on individual books of the Bible)
 - Varies depending on which Bible book you prefer
 - Caution: some commentaries are devotional in nature while others are more technical to the original languages.
- Whole Bible Commentaries (single books written on the entire Bible)

CONCORDANCE

Sort of like a dictionary of Biblical terms. This is a great way to search words and themes and then find the Biblical reference. Usually found in the back of the Bible.

FORMATTING

Pay attention to the formatting (full-justified, left justified, etc.). Especially in the New Testament, when a change in formatting occurs, this usually represents a change in style of writing or a quote from another portion of Scripture.

CROSS REFERENCES

Pay attention to the Cross Reference columns in your Bible. Unless your Bible is a compact or thin Bible, these cross-references should be present. They help you determine which verses are also talked about or referenced elsewhere in the Bible. This is most helpful when trying to understand a difficult passage of Scripture. The best rule is to allow the Bible to interpret itself (Scripture best interprets Scripture).
